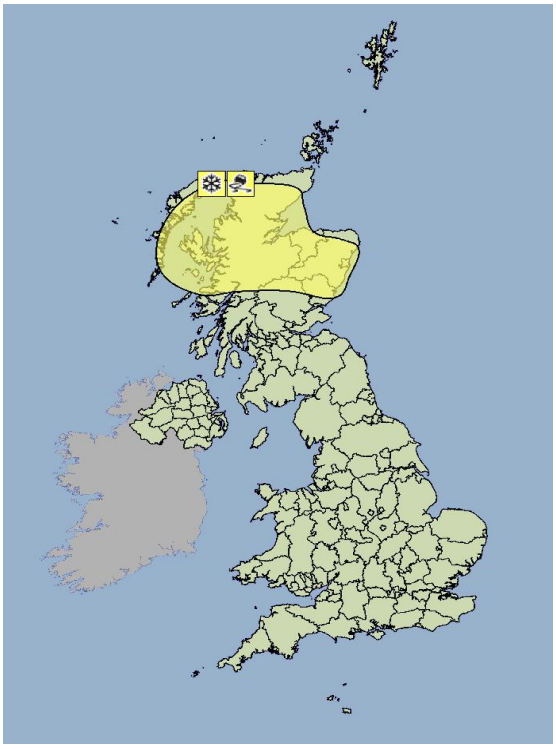
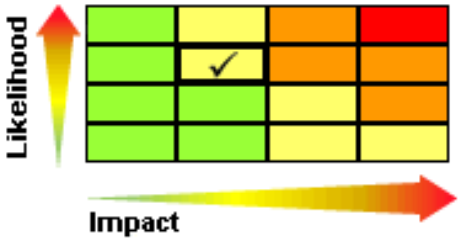
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A separate warning has been issued for snow and ice through Tuesday night and Wednesday daytime.

A further 2-5 cm of snow is expected to accumulate during Wednesday night in places above 200 m. Some snow is also possible to low levels at times. Strong winds will develop through the night bringing temporary blizzard conditions to the highest routes.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow and Ice

Valid from 18:00 on Wed, 31st Jan 2018 until 11:00 on Thu, 01st Feb 2018

Temperatures will quickly fall allowing ice to form on untreated surfaces. Frequent blustery showers of rain, sleet, snow and hail are also expected.

Some roads and railways are likely to be affected by snow with longer journey times by road, bus and train services. Some injuries from slips and falls on icy surfaces are also possible.
